To whom it may concern,

I am pleased to have the opportunity of providing a reference for Andrew Arcello. I have come to know Andrew through my teaching career. He was first a student of mine during his years in middle school, a private piano student through his high school years and after his completion of college I had the honor of working side by side with Andrew as colleagues at a “Fine Arts Summer Camp” in his home town of Bristol R.I. This young man is one of the brightest and most talented students I have encountered throughout my teaching career. His continued achievements in the teaching profession only begin to tell his success story. I am sure in his application he is providing you all the evidence of his musical talents and teaching experiences. Although you have not yet met Andrew, I have had the opportunity to experience first hand his passion for teaching and his bottomless curiosity for continued learning and new experiences. When I watched his teaching style that is when the full extent of his talents and expertise were revealed to me. His personal strengths are his high degree of loyalty and trustworthiness to his work, his students and his associates. In writing you this letter, I hope to persuade you of one thing: to arrange an interview with Andrew. There is no doubt in my mind that you will be interested in this young man. He will certainly be an asset to your school.

Sincerely,
Marilyn Hewitt
